

The World Cup Keeps Exposing the Blatant Western Hypocrisy

News:

The World Cup and controversies surrounding it has been all over international news, social media debates and attention of people around the world for the last couple of weeks.

Comment:

According to slogans and campaigns by FIFA, football is supposed to unite the world across nations, and messages that football associations usually deliver in commercials and banners, that football "unites the world" keeps on purporting this false notion. The ongoing World Cup has confirmed without any doubt, that sports and politics can't be separated, and in practice, these statements of so-called unity are pointless and empty.

Just as politics can't be separated from sports, hypocrisy cannot be separated from Western politics in a world governed by the Western secular way of life. The hypocrisy of the West is continuously exposed, and more are becoming aware of this fact. Debates about Qatar limiting or banning alcohol has been criticised by the Western media, and now sports pundits and commentators admit facts the World Cup has been safe from fan troubles harassment of women because of the limiting of alcohol. The campaigns for the #OneLove message have also been under criticism for taking over the sports, and those teams that have been campaigning aggressively for Liberal values and virtue signalling have received backlash following their sporting failures.

It has been reported that the German team were in disagreements about the choice of signalling oppression by covering their mouths before one of their matches. In general, the "virtue-signalling" and "sportswashing" has been rejected by many, making it clear, that the West lecturing Muslims about culture and values is nothing but hypocrisy. This has even been mentioned by some that agree with Western culture. The West, with its moral decay and massive domestic problems, coupled with their continuous colonizing of foreign countries, are in no moral position to lecture anyone about values or their freedoms, which they conveniently step on against Islam and Muslims living in the West whenever they see fit. Muslims are expected to conform to the Western values, even by force and legal measures, while the Western tourists expect Muslims to welcome their degeneracy and immorality.

None of this is an aversion to the fact that the Qatari regime purports and exposes masses to Western culture and works closely with the Western colonizer to uphold Capitalism in the Muslims lands whilst delivering an understanding of Islam void of its political essence and in alignment with the secular West. This means that standing against Western culture is not enough and is not a victory in and of itself. Rather victory comes when the roots of the colonizing West with their loyal agents of Qatar and other regimes are removed for good and the Khilafah (Caliphate) is established by implementing the entire Islamic system and elevating the Muslim lands with the pure Islamic way of life.
